

Before You Go: Pet Travel Readiness Check

A short readiness check to support clear planning before you travel

- Your pet will remain in their usual home and routine while you're away.

- Feeding times, medication, and supplements need to stay consistent during your absence.

- Your pet has age-related, medical, or behavioral needs that require attention or monitoring.

- You want updates or documentation without needing to ask while you're traveling.

- There should be a clear plan if travel is delayed, extended, or changes unexpectedly.

- The quality of care matters enough that you want it handled thoughtfully, not just completed.

If a majority of these reflect your situation, in-home pet care can remove uncertainty while you travel.
